SHINING stars from across Luton and Dunstable have been recognised for their achievements in the Queen's Birthday Honours.

Ashuk Ahmed, 45, of Austin Road, Luton, was awarded the MBE for services to young people for his volunteer work with Mitalee Youth Association - and in particular his integral role in making community radio station Diverse FM a success.

Andrew Bennett, 51, of Montrose Avenue, who is executive chef at London's Sheraton Park Lane Hotel, was awarded the MBE for services to the hospitality industry and skills training.

Sgt Peter Rawkins, 44, of Beds Police, was awarded the Queen's Police Medal for distinguished service, and his colleague Kam Dhillon, 49, a forensics operations manager, was made an MBE in recognition of his dedication and commitment to the police service.

Recognised for his community work in the list was Geoffrey Farr, 72, chairman of Streatley Parish Council, who was named an MBE. He has been involved with volunteer work in the education sector for most of his life.

Also honoured was Edith Wendy Gray, 69, the director of Luton's Centre for Youth and Community Development, who received the MBE for services to young people.

And Dunstable mum-of-three Terri Miller, 46, of Croft Green, is gearing up for a day out to Buckingham Palace after receiving an MBE for her services as a union safety rep at De La Rue Security Print.
